Weather indications.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 12.—Forecast till 8 p. m. Saturday. For Kansas: Tonight fair; colder. Saturday fair; northwest winds.

A man named Rakeshaw has just been fined $100 in the court at Lyons.

A colored boy at Emporia who tried but failed to break another colored boy's head is now breaking rock at the jail very successfully.

The quarantine at the Soldiers home at Leavenworth has been raised and the old soldiers feel almost like they had got out of Libby prison.

Emporia Gazette: There is a man in Emporia who says he will vote as he prays. He prays four times a day, so the election judge had better watch him.

The bills for the Populist rally at Troy recently announced Secretary of State "Osborn." In view of his "dame shooting" prophecy the name is not inappropriate.

Two Atchison girls are trying to make their parents believe they can pay for a European trip by the money they save in buying their dresses over there, says the Globe.

Since the perfidious football players have left Baker university the faculty has made special arrangements for the students to play "ring around a rosy" and "postoffice" and "clap in and clap out."

The Clay Center Times has found another quotation from the scriptures which is opposed to passers. It is from Proverbs: "A prudent man foreseeth the evil and hideth himself; but the simple pass on, and are punished."

A Fulton young man recently became engaged to a young lady whom the priest forbade him to marry because she was not a Catholic. It didn't take him more than about two minutes to decide between his church and his girl and he took the young lady to Ft. Scott and married her.

When the Topeka Journal, in its search after judges with railroad passes, gets to the Thirty-fifth judicial district it is believed that it will (or could) a tale unfold that would astonish the natives.—Lyndon Herald.

If the Herald knows a tale that ought to be unfolded, why doesn't it unfold it?

The Atchison Globe, which has been in hysterics ever since it heard that Topeka women are going to wear a "reform" dress, ought to be informed that the "Turkish trousers" are all in your eye. The costume is little else than the Jenness-Miller divided skirt and has an ordinary skirt over it. The ten thousand women of Topeka could put the new costume on and walk along the streets and nobody would know from the appearance that a change had been made.

LIBERTY, EQUALITY, FRATERNITY AND IN FANCY.

(Emporia Republican.)

Strange conjunction of unlike qualities! Things of contrary nature, like this, get together easily in times of upheaval. The present political situation reminds one of things which happened in the French revolution. Great words were on men's lips, but strange acts were in their lives. Once in that mighty tumult the children of a peasant woman strayed into the tower of a nobleman's castle which the revolutionists were besieging. The assault had set the castle on fire. The old marquis, a stern champion of royalty, had escaped and was about to seek safety under the cover of night, when the mother's arrival and discovery of her children changed his purpose, and led him to a deed that glorifies humanity.

As Victor Hugo tells the story in "Ninety Three," the old marquis turned back and ascended the tower and brought the children one by one, from out the flames to safety. Then when he himself descended the ladder he was arrested as he knew he would be and sentenced to the guillotine. His nephew, a leader in the revolution, touched by the old man's nobleness, visited his dungeon and set him free. The nephew was himself tried for giving succor to an enemy of the republic and in turn condemned to the guillotine. The protest of Sergeant Radoub, one of the three jurors, addressed to the man on trial, is worthy of being immortalized:

"The old man did a fine thing in saving the children; you did a fine thing in saving the old man; and if we are going to guillotine people for good actions, why, then, get away with you all to the devil, for I don't know any longer what the question is about."

This all brings up the great people's movement which has so shaken Kansas up. Great words of reform were on men's lips, but base actions have been in their lives. The governor gives no heed to the demand to know why he supports the lottery and gambling infamy at Kansas City. Many a simple, true heart out through the state will say: "If you are going to do such things, why, then, get away with you all to the devil, for I don't know any longer what the question is about." Honest voters in the People's party who went in with great ideas of reform that deserved able leadership are feeling the same sort of confusion as that which troubled the many heart of Sergeant Radoub, and they are ready, great numbers of them, to abandon the whole business.

RECEIVER FOR A HORSE.

M. S. Hayes Wants a Guardian for the Custody of the Trotter "Ella C."

A petition was filed in the district court today asking that a receiver be appointed for the custody of "Ella C." the famous trotter. M. S. Hayes, who owns a half interest in her is bringing the action against A. A. Townsend who owns the other half. Hayes claims that on June 28th he purchased his interest in "Ella C." with an oral contract that he should manage her for the season of 1894, the expense of feeding, care, training and driving to be borne equally by them and the profits of the venture to be divided equally. Mr. Hayes alleges that he spent $294.16 expense of taking care of the mare, and that Townsend refuses to pay him any portion of it. He says also that Townsend received 100 lbs of the profits for which he refused to make any account. Hayes claims his services during the season were worth $300, and that the firm owes about $315.

On the ground that "the defendant is unfit by his habits to care for and manage said mare," Hayes asks the court to appoint a receiver for her. He also asks that the proceeds to be applied first to the outstanding debts, second to the plaintiff's claim and the balance divided equally between the two. He also asks that the partnership be dissolved. F. H. Foster is Hayes' attorney.

DR. CLARK WAS BAPTIZED.

Placed Under the Ban of the Quaker Church in Consequence.

Quakers, as the Society of Friends are commonly called, have had so little trouble with heresy that the case of Dr. Douglass Clark of Earlham college, Richmond, Ind., excites special attention. The principles of the Friends are so clearly defined and so easily understood that any departure from them usually takes a man clear out of the church at the first step, and so there is no trial for heresy. It is worth noting that Dr. Clark is much the same sort of man that Hicks was—a man of austere morals and almost ascetic life—and that the besetting sin of such men is apt to be spiritual pride and excessive confidence in their own judgment.

Dr. Clark is 60 years old and a native of North Carolina, was educated at the Friends' school at Providence and at Haverford college, near Philadelphia, the largest Quaker college in the world. He was graduated in medicine at the University of Pennsylvania, but in 1866 gave up the practice to take the chair of Greek and Latin at Earlham. He became one of the most prominent preachers among the Friends in the United States and in 1870-9 traveled abroad and studied the oriental languages. He was for a time editor of the Gospel Expositor and was practically the founder of the theological school at Earlham, of which he has since been the head. Last summer he astonished his friends and all the Quakers by asking for and receiving the rite of baptism at Damascus, O.

When interviewed by the elders, Dr. Clark said he had long believed that George Fox was in error on that point and felt it his duty to be baptized. The elders replied that baptism by the Holy Ghost, as taught by George Fox, was the only and true way in which a blessing could be bestowed by heaven, and that Dr. Clark had seriously offended. He was given permission to renounce his conduct and to make amends by true repentance, but the professor refused. Accordingly he was relieved of his pulpit work and the ban placed over him until his trial.

THE PARKHURST OF CHICAGO.

Career of Rev. W. G. Clarke, Who Is Distinguished by That Title.

Rev. William G. Clarke, pastor of the Campbell Park Presbyterian church in that city, has rather suddenly become famous enough to be called "The Parkhurst of Chicago." He dashed upon the gamblers and their allies without warning, yet with well matured plans and good legal backing, and, according to his enthusiastic supporters, has the evil-doers on the run.

Mr. Clarke was born April 13, 1861—Fort Sumter day—in Adrian, Mich. His parents subsequently removed to New York city and thence to Chicago, where he joined the Presbyterian church at the age of 14. After a brief term at the Northwestern university and the Chicago Theological seminary he went to Princeton and was graduated at 22, being the youngest student to finish the prescribed course in social economy and political science. He then traveled a year, chiefly in central Europe, and took the pulpit of the Wankegan Presbyterian church.

Later he was pastor of another church, and during a year's vacation traveled in eastern Europe, Egypt and Palestine, on which he wrote a book.

In 1888 he became pastor of the Campbell Park Presbyterian church and soon became noted for bold and eloquent preaching against the popular sins of the day. In 1890 he determined to investigate the evils of gambling, for which it was alleged that Chicago was the worst place in America, and with an efficient guide he visited the principal dives in the city. Meanwhile the so-called Civic federation was formed to war against the city's worst evils, and Mr. Clarke was made chairman of the subcommittee on gambling. He laid his plans like a general, employed four capable lawyers, neither of whom knew the others were employed, collected ample evidence with the aid of detectives, and then a general raid was made. It was a brilliant success, and "card sharps" fled the city by scores. He declares that this is only a beginning.

"The only thing to be done now," he says, "is to keep a close watch and notify the police if they grow careless, and then to take extreme measures if they do not act on the warning."

HAD A SHAM BATTLE.

The K. N. G. Maneuvers at the Arkansas City Soldiers' Reunion.

ARKANSAS CITY, Kan., Oct. 12.—The attendance at the last day of the Southwestern soldiers' association reunion was perhaps larger than yesterday, this people of Cowley county turning out in greater force during the forenoon. The reunion closes tonight by a grand camp fire meeting, presided over by the Hon. Tim McGuffey, of Leavenworth, Kan. This, the ninth reunion, has been a glowing success in every particular.
